Navigating Port Clearance Challenges with In-Bond Programs

Navigating U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) regulations is crucial for efficient global trade operations. Through CBP's in-bond program, businesses can transport goods under customs control without immediate clearance, offering flexibility for shipments destined for other U.S. locations, countries, or immediate export. This program helps optimize supply chains and ensures compliance, while managing international shipments through U.S. ports which remains an ongoing challenge.

Traditional customs clearance at ports of entry often leads to:

- Delayed shipments and increased port congestion
- Higher storage fees and customs duties
- Complex logistics coordination

CBP's In-Bond Program Offers Three Strategic Options to Optimize Your Supply Chain

1. Immediate Transportation (IT) – Type 61

- Move goods directly to inland ports
- Clear customs on your schedule
- Ideal for distribution centers and warehouses

2. Transportation and Exportation (T&E) – Type 62

- Transit through the U.S. without entering commerce
- Simplified documentation for international shipments
- Perfect for cross-border supply chains, including import-export between Mexico and Canada

3. Immediate Exportation (IE) – Type 63

- Minimal processing time
- Optimal for urgent international shipments
